

CONSTRUCTION LEADERSHIP COUNCIL

FAQs

What Is the Construction Leadership Council?

The Construction Leadership Council or CLC functions as a forum in which anyone can inform and exchange ideas on issues facing entry to mid-career construction professionals. It is a program that has been put in place to address the needs of young professionals in the industry. Professional development and leadership skills are high priorities and the emphasis on nurturing future leaders, supporters, and voices within an industry is crucial for its growth and sustainability.

The CLC is open to all interested members and non-AGC members without the need for a formal appointment process. To ensure direction and focus, the CLC has a steering committee, a chair and vice chair.

Reasons To Join the Construction Leadership Council

- Personal Development
- Career Development
- Community Involvement
- Industry Involvement

Who Should Join the Construction Leadership Council?

The CLC membership is open to all people in the construction industry, regardless of position. If you are concerned about helping the future leaders of tomorrow grow, and feel you have experiences and ideas to share with others, then you are a perfect candidate! If you are just beginning your career and are looking to meet people in your industry, then you are a perfect candidate! If you are the CEO of a company who wants to ensure the best continuing education topics, then you are a perfect candidate!

To learn more about the Construction Leadership Council and its activities, please contact Charlene Anthony 713-843-3730 or charlene.a@agchouston.org.